Think about it this way. There is a famous fishing lure inventor, working on his best work ever. He's old, and he's been trying to make the best fishing lure for the last 50 years, and knows this will be his last invention. Then he figures it out. He takes one barb, and connects the end of it to the top of another barb. When he does this, he knows his work is finally finished.

Yellow tree is kinda like a traffic light. If you look at a traffic light sideways, it looks green. Therefore, turning your head HORIZONTAL is good. The tree marked with a yellow X on the side of the house is going to get cut down. You've marked it with a yellow X so the hired help knows which tree to cut down. There are a lot of trees on the side of the house, but the tree marked with a yellow X is the only one in danger of causing damage to your roof in the event of a storm.

You also say this thing in a really quiet tone of voice, because you don't want the person or thing you're investigating to know you're on to them.

This kanji is a repeater, or reduplicator. It's used to indicate that whatever comes before it repeats. It's also used to indicate that the kanji that comes before it. For example: 𠂇 is actually 𠂇. This kanji shows up whenever there's a repeating kanji, because it's often easier to write than writing a more complicated kanji twice. That's why this kanji is the repeated. It repeats what comes before it. To remember that this kanji is the repeater, though, think of a drop of water dripping into a prison : Drip drop drip drop. It does that over and over again, driving the prisoners nuts. But it never stops. It just repeats over and over.

Luck, Fortune

The SPIRIT of a SCARECROW is good LUCK and FORTUNE for your crops. When a spirit decides to live in your scarecrow, you'll be granted good luck. Crows won't hang out in your farm. Everything you grow will become large and delicious. But not everyone is so lucky that a spirit will decide to live in their scarecrow. So maybe the luck was in you all along!

Silver

At the root of gold, there is silver. Gold is basically just silver leveled up. That's why gold is first place, and silver is second. If you just scratch gold really good, you'll find that at its root, there's silver hidden just underneath.

Bake, Cook, Burn

A gambler sets fire to his home in order to bake some goods and cook a turkey. Setting his house on fire isn't exactly the brightest idea, but the gambler is taking a gamble that the things he baked and cooked in the fire will offset the cost of a new home. This kanji also means burn because when you cook or bake something for too long, that's exactly what it does.

Kanji 2 / 31		This word has three really important meanings. It's probably best if you remember them all. Let's do this! When you're a guest somewhere it's important to bring geoducks. But more than that, the amount of geoducks you bring is really what matters. If you don't have any live geoducks go ahead and bring any amount of framed picture of geoducks instead. If you can't even do that, well, then you're going to have to tattoo geoducks on your forehead. Kanji 2 / 31		Kanji 3 / 31		In an attempt to control your clothes, you manufacture a mind control device. This mind control device will allow you to control the mind of your clothes and all that they do. You just need to manufacture it. Kanji 3 / 31

Manipulate, Chastity
If someone has their fingers in your syrup, it's just another way of saying they manipulate d you. Cause only slimy people manipulate other people, so their fingers are slimy and sticky because they're covered in your syrup from mucking up your life. This also has another meaning: chastity. Just imagine if someone wanted you to keep your chastity and they called s.e.x. when someone puts their fingers in your syrup. That would be pretty effective, right? Cause it's like, super gross.

You're sewing something with thread but you and your creation get frostbitten while you're still working. Luckily the snowflakes freeze themselves into the cloth and turn into a pretty design. They swirl around and press a unique snowy design into the fabric. This is nice for you because you can't sew anymore with your frostbitten hands.

If you say the lineup of your family members that have lived on this earth under the sun, you're really explaining your genealogy. This kanji has a second meaning too. It means score. So if you're saying the line up of what happened today under the sun you're really just saying the score of a game. So which is it? Are you talking about the past or something that happened today? That's what makes the difference.

Tap, Strike, Slap

Level 18 / 60

On your mouth is a stamp that you strike and beat to create a beat! The stamp looks like a little drum, but you're really just hitting your mouth for fun (the stamp was an excuse to make it seem normal).
